Transfer Notes

The study of philosophy teaches you to ask questions, analyze, contrast viewpoints, and problem solve. A baccalaureate degree in philosophy, by itself, does not lead to any particular job path, but skills learned are universal and can apply to just about every career. Philosophy students find themselves well positioned for admission to graduate schools.

Admission and specific course requirements vary among four-year institutions. Students majoring in philosophy may have a choice of earning a Bachelor of Arts (BA) or a Bachelor of Science (BS) degree, depending on the school they attend. Some schools require additional math and science coursework for the BS degree. Competency through the second, third, or fourth semester of a single foreign language is required for the BA degree in some schools and for all majors in the College of Arts and Sciences at other schools. Ask about the language requirement of the schools you are considering, and complete the required foreign language courses before transfer. In some cases, two years of foreign language study in high school will substitute for two semesters in college.
